

Rewarding Your Online Freelancer With Bonuses And Good Five Star Reviews When Outsourcing On Freelance Websites

Rewarding your freelancer is an effective way to motivate them to do or to continue to do quality work. Rewarding somebody works ten times better than punishing them just like encouragement works better than criticism. There are a number of ways you can reward your outsourcers for superb work and this article will discuss the reasons why you should endeavor to occasionally reward your workforce, especially for exceptional work.

The easiest way to reward your freelancer is to give them a financial bonus. It's not necessary to tell them beforehand, surprises are very effective as a reward as well. It depends on you how much you'd like to reward your freelancer but it should be in line with their current pay structure. Depending on the type of work that had to be done and the quality that was delivered to you, a bonus of 5 - 20 per cent would be sufficient.

Other freelancers might actually prefer to be rewarded with more challenging work. Some people really excel and are motivated by the wish to do excellent work. They rise to challenges, as they would rise to the day. The thought that a crucial part of a program depends on them and then receiving the final product gives them an immense sense of satisfaction. These workers are a blessing in disguise for any business.

Finally some freelancers like to be acknowledged. This might be taken in the form of a certificate, a gift, a plaque or medal. Everyone likes to feel proud about the work that they do and these small gestures help them feel that.

The reasons why you should reward your freelancers are simple. Highly motivated workers produce a higher quality of work. Feeling valued by their employer causes many workers to become more dedicated and focused in order to live up to the value that has been placed on them. And finally your staffs are less likely to be "poached" by others offering them more money.

As you can see there are many ways you can reward your freelancer. First you can reward them with bonuses of money, or you could give them a gift or a symbol of your recognition and acknowledgement of their service. If they value feeling important you can give them more responsibilities. Happy and motivated produce better quality work, stay for longer and provide loyalty that normally money cannot buy.
